

Professor Torger Børresen, PhD, is the Research Director of the Department of Seafood Research at the Danish Institute for Fisheries Research, Professor of Food Technology at the Technical University of Denmark and Co-ordinator of the whole SEAFOODplus consortium with responsibility towards the Commission.

He has served at research councils and advisory groups for research within the food and technology area nationally and internationally, and is still active in the academic world, serving e.g. on editorial boards for scientific journals. He has a long experience in collaborating with industry and industry associations, and has an extended network within both academia and among decision makers nationally and internationally.