

Elena Martin-Bautista, PhD

Nationality: Spanish

Age: 32 years

Current position: Junior Science Officer in the Medical Science Unit at the 'European Science Foundation' in Strasbourg, France.

Elena Martin-Bautista graduated with a first class honours degree in Pharmacy from the University of Granada, Spain. Subsequently, she gained an MSc in Biochemistry and Molecular Biology and a PhD in Pharmacy from the same university. She started in 2005 as Research Officer at the Department of Paediatrics in the School of Medicine at the University of Granada. Her research has focused on topics such as functional foods, infant feeding, obesity, nutrition policies and consumer attitudes. Later she obtained the title of Technical Expert in Technology Transfer by the University of Granada and the qualification of Specialist in Promotion and Management of International Research Projects by the Polytechnic University of Madrid, Spain. She was involved in the EARNEST Project (6th EU Framework Programme) and she developed a management role in the coordination of the NUTRIMENTHE project (7th EU Framework Programme). She joined the European Science Foundation in 2009 and she is currently developing a work based in the science policy strategy, management of European projects and peer review process. She has published 9 articles, 5 chapter books, 40 international and 30 national communications to congresses, symposiums and workshops up to 2010.